Preface

Supporting and recruiting from college and university risk management and insurance (RMI) programs can be an important tactic to help insurance organizations respond effectively to the talent crisis the insurance industry will continue to face over the next few years as baby boomers retire. You see, as a product of one of these programs nearly 40 years ago, I know firsthand that the following are truths:

- RMI graduates are already sold on our industry and want to work in it.
- These young people know the basic concepts (and even some advanced concepts) of insurance.
- They understand our peculiar lingo.
- And, in general, they can get off to a much faster and more productive start in an insurance organization than other students.

The problem is that there are not enough of them coming out of university risk management and insurance programs to fill all the jobs the industry will need to fill in the coming years. One solution to this problem is for insurance organizations to increase their emphasis on recruiting RMI majors as well as their financial support of RMI programs around the country. Doing so will help professors recruit more majors into their programs and thereby bring more talent into the industry.

To facilitate those organizations with an interest in recruiting RMI majors and supporting these university programs, we have compiled this directory of undergraduate programs around the United States. While many of these schools also offer graduate degree programs with an RMI focus, this directory concentrates on their undergraduate offerings since there will be a broader level of interest in these individuals.

This fourth edition of the directory includes listings for 54 RMI programs, 3 more than the third edition, which was published in 2015. The establishment of new programs is a very good sign for our industry.

We have tried to include sufficient information in each program's profile to give you a solid head start in evaluating the program and determining whether to pursue its students. To the extent possible, this information was corroborated by comparing information on their websites with information obtained directly from professors. Links to their websites are also included. If you have suggestions for additions, deletions, corrections, or improvements to the directory, please contact IRMI and your suggestions will be considered for a future update of the directory.

If you would like to learn more about RMI programs in general and how to evaluate them, please read Dr. Brenda Wells's article, "The Insurance Industry Talent Crisis 2015: Investing in Risk Management and Insurance Graduates." While the article is a few years old, it is still very much on point.

I'm excited about providing this free resource to the industry and truly hope it helps you and others respond to the insurance talent crisis. Please let us know if you find it helpful.

Sincerely,

Jack P. Gibson, CPCU, CRIS, ARM
President & CEO
